

Contents

Acknowledgements	7
Introduction	9
PART I
The concept-city and its dissolution	15
1.1 Concept-cities: utopias, Garden Cities, and geometrical perspectives	17
1.2 The country and the city	33
1.3 Cityscapes and networks	40
1.4 Mobility: car-city and the question of sociality	44
PART II
In search of the erotic city: between pleasure and anxiety	63
2.1 Urban drama. Theatre and the city: materiality, dramatic text, and performance	67
2.2 The heritage of City Comedy. Urban drama as a sub-genre: limitations of a genre-oriented approach. Eroticism in the city	69
2.3 The rhetoric of socio-spatial drama	76
2.4 Towards eroticism of the city	78
2.5 Eroticism: revealing, intermittence, gap, hope, hovering, repetition, and encounters with the other	81
2.5.1 Trading cities: exchange, consumption, pleasure, and anxiety	86
2.5.2 Frankie Goes to Hollywood : The paradox of globalization and the tendency to latch on to specific local situations	96
2.6 Diversity, sociality, commonality, and erotic social activity	112
2.7 Encounters with the other : from erotic pleasure to anxiety	122
2.7.1 Mediated encounters	127
2.7.2 Encounters almost simply erotic	131

2.7.3 Encounters: the city is/as a meeting place	135
2.7.4 Proximity and nearness	139
2.7.5 Encounters with the other : spectrality, waste, and death	144
2.7.6 Encounters: return of the traumatic past	154
2.7.7 Encounters with the other : the mentally unstable and the odd	156
2.7.8 The other city	164
2.8 Conclusion	184

PART III

The vagaries of nostalgia in the city and beyond...	187
3.1 The vanished city and the dangers of nostalgia	191
3.2 Heritage and childhood	198
3.3 Nostalgia and the question of authenticity	204
3.4 Being and not-being at home	208
3.5 The city: waste and ruins	212
3.6 Beyond nostalgia	215
Bibliography	223
Index of plays	249
Index of names	253